Greetings from an Isolated Basement

In this issue there's good information on staying in touch with and entertaining our families while we can't see them in person.

Now is the time to make and keep connections as we navigate uncharted waters. We would truly like to reach more of our former LLL friends and colleagues, as well as those who have supported us over the years. Share our membership page with your friends and let them know that you enjoy hearing from us four times

Hey, Friends! Well, things are different now, aren't they? Only ten days ago I was sitting in my car, going on a vacation. Today my only travel is between my home and my office, each of which I happen to share with the same family members. Sure, things are different, but our love for our friends and our families most definitely has NOT changed.

And that's the focus of this issue of Continuum: supporting each other and finding ways to bring peace and a little joy into our lives. Isn't it great to have an inbox to get this newsletter in?

A Letter from the Board President

Dear Sue Ann,

Into my second week of “social distancing” in Houston, I can’t help but think about all my LLL friends and their families. I hope to hear from many of you about your situation and your concerns. Aren't we glad that we know that breastfeeding helps protect babies from the coronavirus?

My husband Larry and I are hunkered down at home, receiving grocery deliveries and watching more movies in the last week than we've watched in months. Yesterday was our 51st wedding anniversary, and we celebrated with a long walk at a beautiful park followed by takeout Mexican food. Not our usual celebration!

The Friends of LLL continue with projects, rolling out the 2020 Mini-grant program and eagerly awaiting our new website design. The Board is working with Leaders in two cities to decide the best spot for our 2021 trip, and we are very close to signing a hotel contract. In fact, we may have 2023 lined up also because the two cities are both very appealing. Stay tuned!

Janet Jendron and Kathy Parkes ended their Board terms and I extend my deep gratitude for sharing their wisdom. The Board welcomed Susan Mocsny Thomas and Randee Kaitcer as Board members. Their talents and insights will help the Board run smoothly and I thank them. I hope to hear that you and your family are well and are managing the pandemic in the best way possible. Please keep in touch.

LLLlove,

Edna

Friends Board Update

Edna Kelly and Susan Mocsny Thomas

We're happy to report that we have two new Board members and some new jobs for 2020. We had planned to elect them at our in-person meeting, but since the Texas Area Network meeting was postponed, we did an email election on March 24. We extend deep thanks to Janet Jendron and Kathy Parkes for their service as Board members.

Susan Mocsny Thomas is a long-time Leader in North

*Randee Kaitcer and Sue
Ann Kendall*

Carolina, USA. She has held many LLL positions through the years and is the keeper of our We Remember book. We are very happy to have her join us on the Board.

Randee Kaitcer is originally from New York and has also lived in Illinois, but makes Fort Worth, Texas her home now. She has many years of nonprofit experience to share with the Friends of LLL, of which we hope to make lots of use!

Sue Ann Kendall has taken on the position of Board Secretary in addition to editing this newsletter. Since she likes to type, this is great for her.

As soon as our new website is ready, Gail Moak will become Board President, while Edna Kelly will remain on the Board as Past President.

Anne Hutton is serving as Treasurer. She's done an amazing job with our financial records, and reports we actually made a profit on our New Orleans trip, which means more money for good things...

...like the mini-grants we are announcing later in this issue!

By the way, we will reschedule our in-person Board meeting as soon as things settle down and we can safely travel again.

Keep Your Membership Going and Encourage Others!

You can help us greatly by sharing our membership link on social media or however you keep in touch with your friends whose membership may have lapsed or who might want to join us. And if your membership is expiring, update it now:

Sue Ann Kendall, your membership expiration date is 11/12/2020.

Making Connections—Long Distance!

*by Melissa Clark Vickers

Way back when, families tended to stay together with multiple generations in one household. Certainly, there are many families today who still live with grandparents and other extended families. And we've all seen the stories like Little House on the Prairie, where a young family sets off for parts unknown, leaving the grandparents behind on the other side of the country. The families stayed connected as best they could, through mailing letters that might take weeks to arrive. Today we have a speedier postal system, and the host of electronic means of connecting families.

3-year old Oliver demonstrating sticker creativity!

The coronavirus scare has created some artificial separations of families and friends as we are urged to “shelter in place” and practice “social distancing.” How can you stay close when you are deliberately not trying to be close? The intergenerational separations are the hardest, whether it’s aging parents or grandchildren who are off-limits for physical hugs and time together.

Here are a few ideas for things to do to stay connected, even when you can’t be there:

Supplies to have on hand, many of which are in the grocery stores. If you happen to be out anyway, see what you can pick up:

Supply of greeting cards for various occasions.

Colorful paper and envelopes.

Stamps. You can order stamps online without going to the post office.

Stickers—especially if you have younger kids to connect with. Kids love stickers! They come in all kinds of topics and sizes, and are typically sold in the greeting card section.

Ideas for Children:

Write letters to your grandchildren. Keep them short and sweet. If they are too young to read, draw silly pictures, or put stickers on the page. A good collection can allow you to create a simple “rebus” letter where a picture substitutes for a word, and a pre-reader can “help” read the letter. Send extra stickers to the child and ask for a letter in return.

For early readers, you may be able to get a list of sight words that the child can read, and you can build most of a letter around those.

For older children who are reading well enough, try creating a mutual story. One of you starts it, sends it to the other, and the other person adds to the story. This might work well by email—a little faster than snail mail.

Make use of technology—make a video call either through a smart phone app, or use the Facebook Messenger. While you have the kids on the phone try:

- › Read a book to them. If they can read, ask them to read to you.
- › Videotape you reading a story. It might go viral like the Scottish grandma reading her young grandbaby The Wonky Donkey!
- › Tell them a story about when you were little. Maybe you had to deal with your grandparents living far away. What did you do?
- › Put on some music and dance on both sides of the call.
- › Sing songs together!
- › Try teaching them a simple craft by video call. Show them how to fold a paper airplane, or something fancier if you are into origami.
- › If you have a very simple recipe, try cooking together. Pick one that doesn't require much in the way of "kinesthetic" knowledge (such as making bread from scratch and knowing when you've kneaded enough) that can't be easily shown by video.

Ideas for Older Friends and Relatives:

Pick up the phone. A call will put a smile on both ends of that call.

Send a greeting card. Remember all those Hallmark commercials showing how cards touch the recipient? Create your own Hallmark Memories!

Send a letter. It doesn't have to be long or earth-shattering. Fill it with the mundane things you do every day. Include cute-kid stories if you have young children. Include a picture or two.

Send a tea bag. Remember the days when LLL District Advisors used to send tea bags in the mail? It's a simple and cheap way to say, "Hi! I care!"

Send an email. Depending on the age or circumstances of your recipient, an email landing in an inbox can be a day-brightener. You can attach pictures. Just realize that some older folks may not have access to a computer or a smart phone. Video calls for seniors are great, too, if they have the technology and knowledge to handle it on their end.

If you have the time and extra cards, send some general greeting cards to a local nursing home. It doesn't matter if you don't know the person who ends up getting a card from you. They will appreciate the thought!

None of these ideas are earth-shattering, complicated, expensive, or hard to do. But any of them lets folks know you are thinking about them—and missing them as much as they are missing you.

Reach out and touch

Somebody's hand

Make this world a better place

If you can

The Art of Downsizing, Part 2

by Barbara Parker

As I told you in the previous Continuum, I worked for almost two years on downsizing in preparation for moving into a retirement apartment, balancing the "all deliberate speed" preference I have in making decisions with the 'keep it just in case' preference of my husband. Now that we are moved into our new quarters (currently with no visitors allowed!), I'll share a few more things that have worked for us, continuing right where I left off!

6. Stuff of your kids' or that you no longer use: If you are still keeping childhood mementos of/for your adult children - especially if s/he has a place of his/her own now - pick a mutually convenient date (visiting you?) and ask them to go through and/or take with them all their mementos. Maybe even video the reaction as they encounter their old stuff! And if you have more than one set of dishes, lots of table and bed linens, take a good look at what you will actually need and/or use and set the rest aside. This is hard when lots of it is sentimental. My husband is an only child, so we got all his family's stuff. And I grew up in India so lots of my "stuff" is unique and irreplaceable.

7. Keep in mind that your kids probably WON'T want most of your stuff. They have their own stuff already and live a different lifestyle than you did. I am fortunate that our son/daughter-in-law JUST bought a house that is twice the size of their apartment, AND that my daughter-in-law has agreed it is okay to take some furniture that isn't her style, because it was my husband's when he was a child, made by a long-time family friend. Our other son has also just bought a house and wants my husband's shop tools, so we are building him a shed to house them. Whew! I KNOW we are lucky in these things.

8. Pictures/wall decor, photos: I have one suggestion on this, and it is one we have not implemented yet. For photos in frames, take the photos out of the frame and put in a folder. A photo folder takes up a LOT less room than the framed photos would! Some suggest adding to this strategy by planning to display a few of the photos at a time, maybe on a shelf, rotating them over a defined period of time (every week?) so you can still enjoy looking at them. I confess I have several boxes of old family photos and the accouterments to organize them into albums and I plan to take them with us when we move, keeping them in our storage unit for the time being and taking out groups of them for particular albums to work on over time.

SO many dishes! So few people to pass them on to! Photo: @mppllc via Twenty20

9. Holiday stuff: We started passing along some of our Christmas ornaments and other holiday items to our adult kids last year, and what they didn't want, went to charity. My daughter-in-law has asked that all the family members consider "gifting" their toddler with ornaments that have special meaning or stories for us, so he can continue a chain of memories we started in years past. If you have celebratory traditions that don't involve stuff, by all means continue those! I make sugar cookies each Christmas that kids in our family get to paint with food coloring, and that will continue since it only involves keeping a few Christmas cookie cutters.

Same goes for Independence Day, Easter, etc.

10. Here are some questions you can ask yourself in downsizing or de-cluttering efforts:

A) Do you love it? Are you keeping it out of guilt? Did you use it in the last year? Will there be room for it? Is it a duplicate?

B) Does it have value? If so, do you need it? If not, sell or donate it. If not, can it be recycled? If not trash it. Does it serve a purpose? Does it make me happy? Do I need this many?

[Barbara has said she'll write up a post on what they did with all the stuff, now that they've moved.]

Do you enjoy the Friends of LLL Facebook page? Do you like to work with fun, social-media savvy LLL friends? Then why not join our merry team of social media funsters, Kate Kerr and Randy Kaitcer (under the leadership of Gail Moak) and help us bring breastfeeding news, humor, and friendship to over 1,100 readers. We all need something fun to read at this time. Come help us! Contact Gail Moak at gmgesley@gmail.com to learn more.

The Membership Coordinator will work together with our Treasurer (and former Membership Coordinator), Anne Hutton, and with our website and Continuum teams. Requiring only a few hours per month, the Membership Coordinator job involves working with Google Sheets online spreadsheets and downloaded data, viewing membership purchase records from our website store, emailing with current and lapsed members, and answering the occasional member inquiry. A Heartfelt Thanks to Carroll Beckham

For the past four years, our friend Carroll Beckham attended all the Friends of La Leche League telephone Board meetings and took notes for us. Her thoroughness has enabled us to remember what we said and did, and helped our team work most effectively. Good minutes are important for all nonprofit organizations, and it was a real joy to not worry about this for four years.

Carroll also was part of the planning team for our most recent trip to New Orleans, and we appreciate the huge effort that was for both her and Evy Simon.

Remembering Pam Oselka

We are deeply sad to announce the passing of Pamela Mendenhall Oselka, longtime La Leche League International staff member and volunteer. Pam served for many years on the board of the Friends of La Leche League (when it was called the LLL Alumnae Association Council). The photo above dates from Pam's retirement from the Council at the end of 2017.

Rest In Peace, Pam, our dear friend and colleague.

We would love to read your memories of Pam, and hope to publish more remembrances in upcoming issues of Continuum. In the meantime, here's her beautiful obituary.

We Remember: A Friends of La Leche League Tradition

“So as we live, they too shall live, for they are now a part of us, as we remember them.”

“We Remember” is a tradition started by the Friends of La Leche League in 2001. We pay tribute to Leaders who have died.

Throughout the history of La Leche League, we have connected to each other on a deep level across countries and cultures. Part of our mission as Friends of LLL is to keep connections strong as we remember and appreciate those who have died.

Leaders' names are recorded in calligraphy in the "We Remember" album by Susan Mocsny Thomas and posted on the Friends of LLL We Remember page. We also have a special event at each Friends of LLL trip. Help us keep an updated list of deceased Leaders' names by completing the online form, or by emailing Nancy Franklin the Leader's name, year of death, and state/country where Leader was active. When possible, include an obituary link.

So far in 2020, we have heard of the passing of these Leaders:
